SITUATION SUMMARY

Oil Sheen, Goleta Beach, Santa Barbara County – Hazardous Material Spill Report # 15-4349

On 07/29/15 at 0900 hours, the Warning Center (WC) completed Spill Report #15-4349, reported by a boat owner offshore of the City of Goleta who reported seeing a half mile sheen. The GPS location the reporting party gave put the boat about a mile offshore of Goleta Beach. The California State Warning Center conducted all appropriate notifications, including but not limited to local government agencies.

- Per Santa Barbara County Fire Department at 1112 hours, they had responded to the original report and found a 40 foot sheen at 1,000 yards off Goleta Pier.
- The WC contacted SURCOM and was told that they had assigned a Warden to the incident. At 1645 hours, the assigned warden advised she will meet with USCG and take samples at the beach. Biologist also on the way. Samples will be taken to a lab in Santa Barbara for analysis. ETR will be longer than a few hours.
- Per US Coast Guard Sector Los Angeles, they called their Marine Safety detachment in Santa Barbara County to advise them of the report. They also checked with all the offshore Platforms who verified that there were no discharges or visible oil in the water.
- Reports from a USCG overflight shows non recoverable oil sheen near platform Holly, which has been shut down for the last month. Since it isn't pumping, seep would increase. USCG will boat out to the sheen just to take samples. Clean up is unlikely.

Per Santa Barbara County OEM at 1640 hours, the slick near Goleta Beach is currently being investigated as an incident separate from Refugio.

- It is described after a USCG overflight as an unrecoverable sheen approximately 3 miles x ½ mile, with 30 percent coverage.
- OSPR and USCG responded to the beach and took samples.
- USCG will also take sheen water samples for comparison.
- There are some tar balls on the east side of the beach, and County Fire is also reporting some tar balls at Hope Ranch.
- The beaches remain open, though beachgoers are advised to avoid oil contact.

Cal OES Duty Officers continue to monitor the situation.

Train Derailment, Galt, Sacramento County – Hazardous Material Spill Report # 15-4364

The railcars are not carrying any hazardous materials. There were no injuries and no hazardous material releases associated with this incident. Notifications were made per CSWC SOP.

WEATHER

WEATHER SYNOPSIS BY REGION:

Northern Region

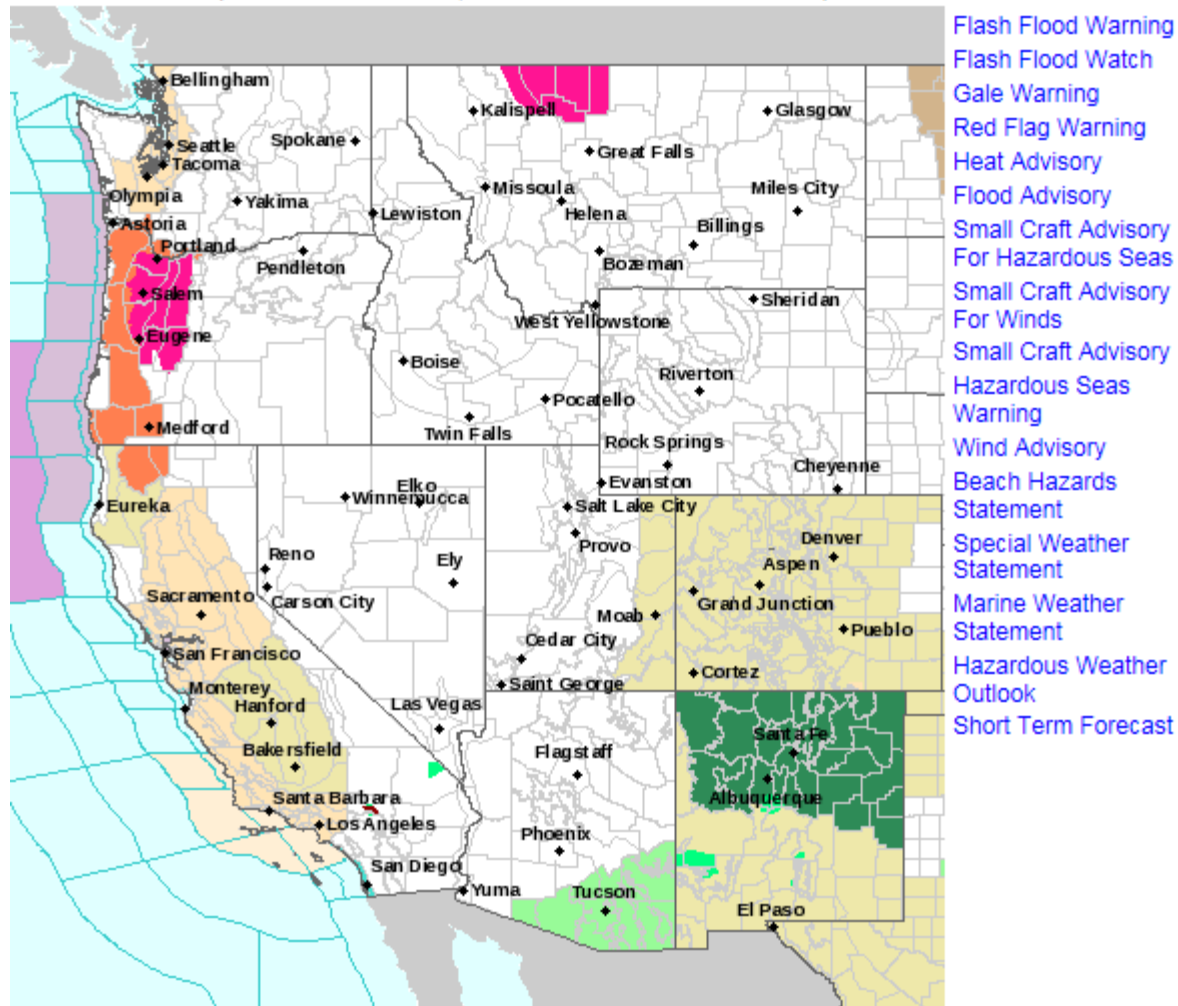

Strong high pressure builds towards the region from the southeast with very hot and dry conditions the next few days. The warmest inland valley's will be pushing 110 degrees today through Friday. Afternoon relative humidity levels of 7-17% expected with poor overnight recoveries. Late Thursday night into Friday some monsoonal moisture is expected to move up into Northern Operational area from the south, associated with a weak low well off the Southern California coast. The details of how this moisture will affect the northern operational area remain very uncertain. For now, however, it appears our western locations may be affected first, especially the Bay Area, the Sonoma Lake Napa Unit, and Mendocino County, where some evening or overnight thunderstorms may become possible either late Thursday night or more probable on Friday. Much of this moisture is expected to move offshore, but just enough moisture may be in place for very isolated thunderstorms across both Northwest California and the Sierra Cascades over this weekend. The high will weaken somewhat late this weekend and a more significant cool-down early next week with a cold front dropping down from Alaska.

Southern Region

High pressure is expected to move into the Four Corners region, which is a favorable position to bring monsoonal moisture into the region. Southeasterly flow will develop today, which will allow scattered thunderstorms to develop over Southern California. Most of the storms today will occur from the eastern side of the Angeles national forest into the San Bernardino and Cleveland National Forests and into the deserts. Initially, a few dry strikes may occur near the higher terrain of Southern California during the onset of these storms during the mid-afternoon hours, but once deeper moisture arrives toward evening, all storms should turn wet. Temperatures will be quite warm with highs in the 80s along the coast, 98-102 in the valleys and up to 108 in the deserts. Minimum relative humidity will be higher over Southern California, but the central part of the state will see readings in the 10-15% range above 5,000 feet. The greatest number of thunderstorms during the period may be Thursday when deeper moisture and greater instability arrive. Wet thunderstorms will be possible over most of the district, including Central California, with a handful of storms possible on the Central Coast by Thursday evening. Brief heavy rain will be possible from the storms. The winds aloft are expected to become more south and southwesterly this weekend which will result in less convection overall. Scattered thunderstorms will continue in the Sierras through early next week, but only a handful of storms are expected across the higher elevations of Southern California each day. The rest of the district will remain mostly sunny with temperatures continuing to run 8-10 degrees above normal this weekend into early next week. The storms may end altogether by next Wednesday or Thursday with slightly cooler weather developing along the coast.
